Attention Ken Bryant's lawyer: Your client is NOT ENTITLED to access radio resources owned by others. Fix your attitude problem, jerkoff.

Easy solution: Just shut it off. Disconnect from DMR-MARC. Run RAS. Bye bye dickhead Ken Bryant, K1DMR.

DOUCHE OF THE YEAR AWARD.

Exactly. Ken's fanboys don't understand that access to these repeaters is not a right and his lawyer's statement clearly proves he doesn't understand that as well.

They can whine all they want about due process but so far nobody has provided any proof that due process is required.

I'm sure the lawyer knows more or less what time it is. But he'll keep this farce up as long as Ken keeps writing him checks.

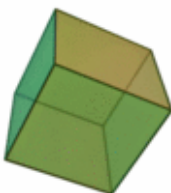

He's a lawyer, after all.

He's obliged to tell his client that it's a dumb idea and that he'll probably lose.

But he's not obliged to stop acting on his idiot client's instructions unless his client asks him to do something illegal or unethical.

No way. Those two guys would have to get together in one of the hangars at the Air Force base so their egos have enough room.

There is a definite need for tort reform in the USA. Sadly, this lawsuit may be the handwriting on the wall for many a system if this #$$@&^% (bad language masked) wins this lawsuit. Of course he doesn't HAVE to win to run almost any of us (in a similar situation) into bankruptcy. I see that this may foreshadow a LOT of systems going completely private in the future.

Locally, our system is already private -- with RAS. A local  (hi Mikey) has resorted to childish Facebook group postings, because he's unable to participate/monitor our PRIVATE system. I guess he sits in his basement masturbating, listening to most everyone else, except us -- and that pisses him off.

True story: When I was 15 years old (I'm 37 now) this "Mikey" guy would camp outside of my house in his van, stalking me and listening to cordless phone conversations I was having with my friends and family. He's the reason why AES-256 now exists.

Everything in the Bryant lawsuit, and the mentality about having access to closed systems, points to ENTITLEMENT attitude. Anyone who feels entitled to access another person's private property without permission is a piece of shit who needs a severe beating.

I was set up relatively close to him at Dayton selling DMR & P25. It appeared he was conducting business just fine despite the lawsuit. Nobody boycotted, rioted or protested and it seemed he had a steady flow of people throughout the event. So who knows how much this is actually affected him...

It's a shame the toll this has taken on him and his enjoyment of radio as a hobby.

It's a real damn shame that the Hams involved have to defend themselves against such as sphincter leaks as Ken. I've read most of the documentation involved and frankly I believe he's only continuing the lawsuit now because he can financially. It's gone beyond "I'm not allowed on your network" and "I lost business because you deny me access to the network." Bullshit. He probably didn't lose any business where he sells /\ radios to other dealers that aren't Motorola dealers who know nothing about this lawsuit. More than likely that's where the funding to continue this lawsuit bullshit is coming from. So, congratulations K1DMR. You've become another shit stain in the hobby of ham radio. For you and your legal team to use case law that really has nothing to do with Ham radio is pretty perverted. This lawsuit is just as stupid as the hams in the '70s that used to try sue the ham radio clubs because they weren't allowed on the phone patches. Or the idiot ham that solicited traffic reports on local repeaters in a conversation then went on air on commercial radio stations AS A PAID TALENT with those same reports. Got his  thrown off those repeaters by the FCC then was required to retest his Technician class license. He didn't pass it, he claimed all sorts of crazy crap like religious prosecution and mental disorder and his wife being sick, blah blah blah.

I've been a ham for 36 years. I learned early on you can't use ham radio to sell ham radio. Few exceptions are you can list personal equipment for sale like on a swap net but you really can't run your electronic flea market on air.

I do not know anybody from the PRN group and I'm sure sorry to see that the guys that are involved in this lawsuit have to defend themselves against such stupid idiocy. Guarantee you, ZERO percent of these folks dreamed that putting their Network together would cause them to be exposed to financial hardship caused by an egotistical whiner with no respect to the hobby that is Amateur Radio. Get it Ken? Amateur! Not professional, not commercial, not for profit. Obviously you cannot separate the two so you'll go after "little guys". WhackTard.

Wonder what will happen when his commercial side dealer to dealer sales network starts to fall apart?

I want to thank you for the generous offer. I have a repeater on the NCPRN and was named in the suit. I put in $20 (Scott Parham - KE4FHH) as I had a lot of repeater crap at other sites happen all at once. If I would have known before I spent the money on the other sites, it would have all gone to Scott at PRN. I know he got banned from here, but Jeff (Sandy's Communications) put up $500! Any amount helps. It saddens me to hear that he is giving up due to non-support, but I do not blame him one bit. I've been listening to the PRN talkgroup and most of the chatter is about them not being able to see the Last Heard list or be able to download the latest codeplugs. Only TWO donations have been added to the GoFundMe page since he put out the notice on the PRN website yesterday morning. I know I am done with providing ANYTHING to cheap-bastard hams. If the PRN dies, then I'll just put RAS on my repeaters make people sign a contract if they want to use the system.

"both are great vendors"? Are you f u c king kidding me? I wholeheartedly agree about Jeff, but last time I checked he wasn't trying to f u c k his customers. Mentioning the two in the same context is ridiculous, but you have had your head up Ken's  throughout this whole ordeal.
